Addressing ethical and legal issues to enable positive use for the benefit of all people

TAGC's goal is to communicate genetic knowledge in an accessible way and to address its ethical and legal issues - to enable everyone to benefit from genetic discoveries. To achieve this, TAGC brings together efforts from scientists, media, lawyers and policy makers. It also provides key information in an accessible way, and training and consultations at different levels. Read more 2214 Science AMA Series: I'm Professor Yulia Kovas, Director of The Accessible Genetics Consortium in conjunction with Goldsmiths, University of London. I'm interesting in finding out what people know, think and feel in this post genomic era. AMA!

Hi Reddit!

I am a psychology professor at Goldsmiths University with a particular interest in how our genes interact with our environments to help create who we are. Every human trait that has ever been measured has been found to have a genetic component, and as technologies improve we are beginning to hone in on exactly which genes relate to which traits. The importance of this cannot be understated and will continue to have a huge impact on society. It is vital that we are all engaged with the debate on how this information can be used and I am interested in finding out what people know, think and feel about genetics, especially in relation to the self and society.

Take our survey and find out how prepared you are to help shape the post genomic world.

An attempted guide through the onslaught of all that is neuro.....

We can replace hearts, help create babies in vitro & are making great strides in fighting many diseases. Despite this, we know less about the brain than we do about the surface of the moon! And yet, the brain is ubiquitous in society, constantly appearing in news articles, in advertisements for brain-trainers and in debates about how to improve children's brains through education. This talk will take you on
